

To start, we start analyzing the file with volatility... only that does nothing. Instead, I used strings e.bin | grep "password" to try and see if I find anything that way. At one point I found...a weird string, passwordflagwin. Turns out this is in fact the correct password. I have no clue what the intended solution even is, but this seems to be about it.

Made with love by: AndreiCat