If we look in the assembly view instead of the pseudocode view of the function telling us to solve the additions, we find a bunch of predefiened values and additions.

I simply copy pasted the section to ChatGPT and told it to translate to python and print the final stack values in order. This gave me a long string of decimal values, which if converted to text reveal the flag preceded by a lot of random chars.

Made with love by: AndreiCat